BREWER'S EXAMINER
CHARGES ANSWERED

Pointed Questions Published as Paid Material, and Directed at William Glasemann, Are Completely Answered—More Democratic Insinuations Which Indicate a Desire For a Dirty Campaign.

Chas. Humphris has been made the chairman of Brewer's campaign committee, and he realizes the value of newspaper advertising. He appeared in this morning's Examiner with about 200 lines which, at a cost of 25 cents per line, is just $50. It comes high, but the Brewer bunch see the handwriting on the wall and are making a desperate effort to save the sinking hulk of Brewerism. Charley Humphris must have lots of money as he is running his campaign matter in the Examiner editorial columns. The newspaper's editorial columns are sacred and reflect only the opinions of the editor. So Charley must have paid a stiff sum to slip in to the Examiner's editorial columns. It is an old saying, "Money makes the (mayor) mare go."

Charley Humphris would not pay the Standard a single cent for his campaign matter, but to show the quality of his attacks we republish his stuff in tonight's Standard.

Give us some more, Charley. We like it. Be sure you let Brewer and Smurthwaite write some of the stuff.

"Ogden now owns the waterworks. Mayor Brewer and his administration have made that an accomplished fact. Mayor Glasemann promised the people eight years ago that he would have the waterworks system in ninety days after election. He employed attorneys to advise him that he could not condemn the system. Ogden city paid the bill."

The above is Brewer shot No. 1 in the Morning Examiner. Our answer is: When William Glasemann ran for mayor the second time he told the people why he did not buy the waterworks and he was re-elected by a majority of three times as large as he received at the first election. Come again, Brewer.

"Better not take the chances. We have no postoffice inspectors or civil service department."

The above is shot No. 2 from Brewer's gang. Our answer is that a man who proved that his record was good regardless of all the postoffice inspectors can be trusted.

"Do you want more water mains extended? How will you get extensions from Glasemann? He wants to have the chance to prove the system a failure. Better not take the chances. We have no civil service inspectors."

The above is shot No. 3 from the Brewer guns in command of Captain Charles Humphris. Our answer is that William Glasemann pledges himself to extend the water mains until all the people of Ogden have water. He will do everything in his power that is honorable to prove the waterworks a success. Brewer's gang simply misrepresents Mr. Glasemann. Come to the meeting at the Weber Stake Academy tomorrow (Wednesday) evening, and the proof will be presented that the Brewer gang need a watch man, if not an inspector.

"No detractor of the Brewer administration can gainsay the fact that during the first six months that the city owned the waterworks, the sum of $21,233.20, which had hitherto gone into the pockets of the stockholders of the water company, was expended in improvements of the system, which are beneficial to the inhabitants of Ogden City."

The above is shot No. 4 from Brewer's mud batteries. Our answer is that the $21,000 profits formerly claimed by Brewer for the first six months of the waterworks are now admitted to have been spent on improvements of the system. That sounds good to us. It shows that there was no profit at all, but that all the receipts of the waterworks were put back into the system. So the Brewer gang is hedging? All the profits spent? Your confession proves all Mr. Glasemann has claimed.

Referring to Glasemann's resignation as postmaster, the Brewer mud gun says:

"Charles R. Crane, late ambassador to China, was also permitted to resign."

Our answer is: First, read Glasemann's reply and the statement from the office of the postmaster general, published yesterday. Then we will admit that Ambassador Crane and Glasemann, like the parrot, talked too much.

It will be seen that Mr. Glasemann reproduces the stories from his enemy's camp and answers them without equivocation.

Compare the Republican meeting to tomorrow evening. There will be something worth hearing.

"Do you believe Mr. Glasemann told the truth when he said, 'At the time of his election Mr. Brewer was financially embarrassed, but since the purchase of the waterworks he is on easy street'?"

The above is shot No. 5 from Brewer's specially engaged prevaricators. Our answer is, if the Brewer gang can openly accuse William Glasemann of receiving money for not buying the waterworks, we can, on the same kind of evidence, say that Brewer was evidently paid to buy them. Does Brewer deny that he is in first-class financial condition now?

"Did Glasemann keep his promise to buy the waterworks?"

The above is shot No. 6 from Brewer's guns. Our answer is, the people re-elected William Glasemann by a greatly increased majority for not buying the waterworks at double the price it cost to build a new system.

"Who paid for the sidewalk intersections put in during Mr. Glasemann's administration?"

The above is shot No. 7 from Brewer's double charged Gatling guns. Our answer is, that when William Glasemann was mayor he spent $150,000 from the city's general fund for macadamizing streets and building sidewalk crossings, and did it without taxing the people one cent for the extraordinary improvements, and that he left money enough in the treasury when he quit to finish all the sidewalk crossings that were left unfinished because of cold weather. What became of this money? Who got away with it?

"In spite of all Mr. Glasemann's criticism of the report of the special waterworks committee, we still challenge him to show that a net revenue of $21,233.20 was not derived from that department during the first six months of municipal ownership under the Brewer administration? It was put back in the system."

The above is shot No. 8 from Brewer's kick-back batteries. Our answer is, hear Mr. Glasemann at the Weber Stake Academy big hall tomorrow evening, and see yourselves as others see you. Bill will give you a chance to ask questions. Come loaded.

"We challenge Glasemann further to show that this sum of money, representing the net earnings of the system for the first six months, was not expended in extensions of the system, in partially paying for other improvements of the system."

The foregoing comes from Brewer's flare-back gun. Our answer: Mr. Glasemann has claimed all along that the first six months there were no profits; that all the receipts were expended to better the system. The Breweries claimed $21,000 net earnings or profits. We said we wanted to see the money. Now the Breweries admit they have no money. Shame on you! Why do you confess now. Did you see Glasemann go over the books at the city hall?

Referring to Glasemann's resignation as postmaster, the Brewer mud gun says:

"Charles R. Crane, late ambassador to China, was also permitted to resign."

Our answer is: First, read Glasemann's reply and the statement from the office of the postmaster general, published yesterday. Then we will admit that Ambassador Crane and Glasemann, like the parrot, talked too much.

It will be seen that Mr. Glasemann reproduces the stories from his enemy's camp and answers them without equivocation.
